I. Introduction

1. The present report is the twenty-first consolidated report on the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms issued by the Secretary-General since the establishment of the Register.[1] The General Assembly, in paragraphs 2 to 5 of resolution 66/39, called upon Member States to provide their data and information on international transfers of major conventional arms covered by the Register, including "nil" reports and additional background information, on an annual basis.

2. On 18 March 2013, the Secretariat sent a note verbale to Member States requesting them to submit their reports no later than 31 May 2013.[2] The replies received are reproduced in sections II to IV and in the annex below. Any further national reports and additional information received from Governments will be issued as addenda to the present report.

3. An online reporting tool for the Register was first made available to Member States in 2012.[3] The percentages of Member States that used the online reporting tool in filing their national reports have increased from 20 per cent in 2012 to 44 per cent in 2013.

4. The originals of the replies from Member States are available for Governments from the Office for Disarmament Affairs of the Secretariat.[4] The annual reports and other relevant information on the Register of Conventional Arms are available on the website of the United Nations Register.[5]

Views received from Governments

China

[Original: Chinese/English]
[Date of submission: 31 May 2013]

Resolution 66/39

Transparency in armaments

China has always attached great importance to the United Nations. Register of Conventional Arms and actively participated in the work of all the Group of Governmental Experts established for the Register and made important contributions to the establishment and development of the Register. Since 1996, a particular Member State had provided data to the United Nations Register on its arms sale to Taiwan Province of China, which contradicted the spirit of the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly as well as the objectives and principles of the United Nations Register. China was impelled to suspend its submission of data to the Register. In 2006, the problem related to Taiwan in the Register was solved. Since 2007, China has resumed submitting data to the Register annually.

Germany

[Original: English]

With reference to General Assembly resolution 66/39 on transparency in armaments, in particular to paragraph 5 (a), which reads:

> "5. Reaffirms its decision, with a view to further development of the Register, to keep the scope of and participation in the Register under review and, to that end:
>
> (a) Recalls its request to Member States to provide the Secretary-General with their views on the continuing operation of the Register and its further development and on transparency measures related to weapons of mass destruction",

Germany would like to make the following comments.

The United Nations Register of Conventional Arms has proved to be one of the few and effective global transparency measures. Germany strongly supports this instrument and has regularly reported to the Secretary-General.

Germany has also encouraged States to report in a comprehensive manner, including on small arms and light weapons. Germany believes that the inclusion of reporting on small arms and light weapons as a mandatory category of the United Nations Register would enhance in a substantive way the usefulness of this instrument. In many parts of the world, small arms and light weapons are the main factor of instability, often exceeding heavy weaponry as a stability challenge. In particular in Africa, it is small arms rather than heavy weaponry fuelling regional as well as internal conflicts.

The groups of governmental experts that convened in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 57/75, 60/226, 63/69 and 66/39 in 2003, 2006, 2009 and 2013, respectively, all debated on the possibility of including small arms and light weapons in the Register. With the adoption of a universal treaty on the global trade in arms, the Register will serve as a reference at the moment of the coming into force of this treaty. As the global trade in arms includes in its scope small arms and light weapons, including small arms and light weapons in the Register as well seems even more pertinent.

Germany is concerned about the declining number of reports submitted to the Secretary-General since the beginning of the past decade. Germany believes that a renewed effort should be made to strengthen the universal use of this instrument of transparency and trust-building, including by submitting "nil" reports. In this context, Germany welcomes the new online reporting mechanism established by the Office for Disarmament Affairs of the Secretariat.

In view of the dynamic technological progress and the resulting changes regarding shape, operation and nature of conventional weapons, Germany regards it as essential to allow for a flexible and proper evolution of the Register. Owing to the recommendations of the respective groups of governmental experts, the Register has been further developed since its establishment. However, Germany believes that technology has evolved even faster in this period, allowing for the emersion of new weaponry, potent enough to have an impact on overall military effectiveness, but without being properly reflected in the Register. Therefore, Germany believes that it is time for a more fundamental debate on the nature of the categories, in particular with regard to a further technological acceleration in the future.
